Fun with a Green Screen:

Matt, one of the group leaders, brought his green screen from home for the kids to learn about making movies and special effects. He thought it would be cool to show off because some of the kids were talking about making a You-Tube video.

Matt: Why do you think that movie makers, you-tubers, and photographers like to use the green screen?

Andrew: It helps them be creative!

Taylor: It looks really cool and real!

Nola: Maybe their room is messy, so they want to cover it up?

Jack: It makes for better content; they help people understand the story better and they are good for action.

Soledad: They are good for special effects!

Matt: If you had access to a big building covered in green screens like they have in Hollywood, what would you create?

Nola: A You Tube video! It could be "Spend twenty four hours in a green screen" challenge!

Jack: I'd make a Lego movie and I would hire editors to help me.

Andrew: I would make a video game advertisement.

Taylor: Dance Movie

Fun with a Green Screen (con't):

Matt: How do you think the green screen works?

Jack: Green is a bright color and acts like an illusion. Computers also help make it look cool.

Andrew: Blue screens are a thing too. The green screen feels like a seat belt!

Felix: Woah! There's a dragon effect! I want to be running from the dragon!

Charles: I'm wearing a green shirt and look! I'm a floating head!
