Afterschool Snacks From Afar: When I ask our community what they want to do it's almost always to eat something! So, I brought in the first snack of many and lovingly call it 'After School Snacks From Afar.' The first snack is from England and its beans on toast. "What are these beans?" asked Aspen. On buttered toast, we enjoyed some Heinz Beans "They are kinda tomato kinda not," said Darren, "but it's pretty good!" Addi preferred just plain toast. "It's just too weird," she exclaimed. We saw some videos of people making their own and some people add hot sauce or ketchup to their toast. I will keep you updated on our afterschool snack adventures.

We Ride At Dismissal!: Owen has a great penchant for fantasy and has quite a knack for sucking us all into a game! Scooter Jousting was just that. Everyone was itching to be active, but no one wanted to go outside! ‘We have pool noodles!’ yelled Andre and he was right! Owen took the lead and played the game of all players on scooter horses trying to poke their opponent off their ‘horse.’ ‘Im gonna fall off!’ Jada kept yelling while laughing at the same time. The game got so intense that they all abandoned their scooter horses for the front of the school where they dodged and dived around the bushes and rock paths! ‘I’m gonna get you next time!’ shouted Darren as he shook his fist hiding a smile. All the kids came in out of breath and all smiles.

‘Desert Children’ Are Asked About The Rain

We have a little joke here at Zuni about when it rains we see what kind of ‘Desert Children’ we have. If you have grown up in a desert-like climate, you come to either HATE rainy days or LOVE them. We asked our two resident ‘Desert Kids’ Nicole and Aspen about the rain.

‘It’s magical!’ said Apsen in awe. When asked if rainy days are fun at school Nicole had a stronger opinion ‘It makes me sad that teachers won’t let us outside, it’s just water – I will dry off.’ When asked if they prefer snow days or rainy days the consensus was unanimous, ‘Rain!’ they both shouted! ‘I don’t have to wear special clothes on rainy days,’ said Aspen. ‘I can just get wet and play!’ said Nicole. They were bummed when we had to go inside due to lightning but couldn’t wait to go outside again!
