

"We were learning about self-portraits. Some people took pictures, but I drew mine because I'm an artist. I had a different mask on then, that's why it's different. We looked in a mirror and tried to draw the same thing that we saw in the mirror on the paper. Do you think it looks like me?" - Naomi from Cabin 3

Perfect Patterns

We started this week learning about ancient patterns and identifying them in old art work.

We had a kit that gave us partial pattern stamps and we tried to find them on ancient pottery and textiles. We quickly moved on to creating our own patterns that featured brand new art. "I think patterns are like patties, you know, patties that keep repeating themselves. If you put some of the triangles patterns on top of each other it looks like a monster. I'm going to add some flowers in a row like it is walking through and the sun is coming off its head, I think I'll add some spirals and rainbows too, repeat, repeat, repeat." Said Makenzie as she worked.

As we moved on to different pattern concepts we were introduced to the artist Yayoi Kusama. Kusama is famous for her interactive and family friendly exhibition called the "Obliteration Room." Yayoi Kusama's interactive Obliteration Room begins as a white space which visitors are invited to cover with stickers. Over the course of a few weeks the room is transformed from a blank canvas into an explosion of color, with thousands of spots stuck on every available surface. We wondered how we could create our own Obliteration Room in the cafeteria. Cabin 5 helped create a space that could be covered in dots. We covered the walls with yellow butcher paper. Each cabin was given sheets of sticker dots with the instruction to place them anywhere they wanted within the boundaries. Over the course of a few hours we saw the space transform into a piece of it that you could walk into.

Happy All-A-Day!

Last week we celebrated all our favorite holidays in one week! We celebrated, Hanukkah, Halloween, Christmas, Diwali, Eid, Valentine's Day and St. Patrick's Day.

"My favorite holiday is Christmas. I don't technically like Christmas day, but I like decorating. I don't like that Christmas is just one day because it's over so quick and then you have to wait a whole year," said Zoey from Cabin 4

"My favorite holiday is Eid, it's about family and you get to eat candy!" said Issa from Cabin 3

"My favorite holiday is Halloween for the sake of wearing costumes. You get some exercise too," said Dragon from Cabin 4.

"My favorite Holiday? It's hard to choose. I get excited for all of them!" said Blake.

Here are some of our favorite snapshots from the week.
