ROCKETS IN ACTION!

Italian Soda Tasting

The kids wanted to get global with our latest food Friday so we tried our hand at Italian Soda! Initially, the kids were apprehensive about mixing the dairy with soda, but after tasting each element on their own and thinking about other food combinations they liked, they gave it a try and ended up liking them!

They tried an assortment of flavor combinations, but the consensus was that cherry and chocolate were the best duo.

Pro Player Pro Teacher
The card game James Bond has been making its rounds throughout CC and the kids have been picking it up quickly!

As the older kids have played with crowds of younger friends watching, some of them began asking how to play the game. Pictured to the left is Adyson showing her friends how to play. She used her own experiences of learning to play to teach them and with patience they had a game going in no time!

MAGICAL MOMENTS

Beauty in the Bubbles

One morning, when the weather was especially nice, the kids were talking about how clear the skies were. Under their breath, Zachary said that it was, "perfect bubble weather." The other kids asked what that meant. According to Zachary (pictured to the left), semi-warm weather with no wind was the perfect bubble weather because they don't blow away. With that, we pulled out the balloon rods to put it to the test!

The kids had fun watching Zachary do some cool tricks, and had even more fun learning to do them as well. When asked about why he liked bubbles and he said that you had to be gentle with them but you can always try again to make bigger ones, but even the smallest bubbles look pretty when they pop!
