Paper Bag Puppets with Sophia

This month's curriculum focused on being cost friendly and using the materials we already had at the site. This encouraged us to use our imaginations and the kids had a blast and were creative with making their puppets. I remember enjoying making these when I was little and making all sorts of these so I'm glad the kids had fun making them too!

Tessa- "I made a kitty and I liked it because it was so cute and I made it for my dad."

Anastasia- "We got to paint on our puppets!"

Self-care Club with Eric

Self-care Club was based around simple tips for your stomach, skin, mental health, eating habits and more. We discussed about how a bunch of different things in our daily lives, can be doubled up to get multiple different uses out of them. That knowledge can help the kids as they get older in ways like being cost efficient and helping reduce stress or solve problems for them by giving the kids numerous answers for daily habits. They mostly had a blast eating up the Greek yogurt with cinnamon and honey which was a great, healthy afternoon snack!

Rosa- "My favorite part of the club was eating the cinnamon yogurt."

Breelyn- "I learned how to have the ingredients helped your face and how it can get rid of pimples and blackheads."

Thoughtful Reflections with Erica: Making Journals

Thoughtful Reflections was inspired by the practice of guided journaling. As kids and adults, emotions and life can get jumbled together and become challenging to navigate. Journaling is something that I enjoy and practice in my daily life to help with that, and I wanted to introduce this practice to the kids at CC.

We explored cost effective ways to craft our journals by using materials we already had and then enhanced them with fun scrapbooking stickers and tape. I then provided some optional guided prompts for the pages to assist them in their writing journey. Overall, they enjoyed the process of creating the journal and have since expressed that they have been taking the initiative to answer the prompts on their own time.

Handmade Valentines Cards with Eric

A lot more kids took part in this activity than I thought so it went really well! I thought Valentines cards would be overlooked but Julissa, Ava, and Hosna have a knack for helping make everything fun! Ethan & Anastasia even made sure to craft their parents something. We had stickers, stamps and a lot of glitter that made the cards sparkle.

Julissa- "My favorite part of the activity was being able to use all the glitter."

Ava- "My favorite part of the activity was probably having that time to spend time with my friends and making cards with them."
