Wolf Pack Spotlight: Meet Megumi

“Hi! So.. first, I was in Michigan and grew up until 7 then I move to here. Here it is pretty hot and dry, and Michigan is pretty humid and wet. One of my schools before was GOK then North Star. And then I also go to Japan often. There there's these $1 shops which makes it awesome. And then there's also other stuff that I like. I've run Japanese clubs during summer camp that we can probably do again here!”

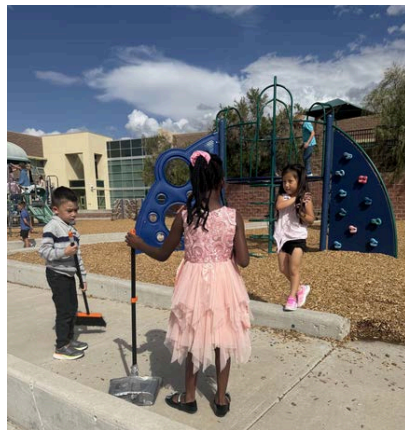

Mission: Save The Playground

Our outdoor play area needed a little help, and our Wolves were ready to report for duty! Their mission? Rescue the runaway wood chips and return them to their designated play areas! With all the fun that happens on our playground, wood chips can be found wandering outside their usual spots. Rain and weather can move them around, and of course, kids being kids can send a few flying during all the running, digging, jumping, and exploring! The kids used their helping hands, got to work and returned the escaped wood chips to where they belonged. Along the way, our kids learned that taking care of their community can be an adventure, too. By working together, they helped make sure their friends have a clean, safe, and welcoming space to play and explore. Mission accomplished! The playground is back in order, and the kids are officially on standby for their next community mission!

“Oh, this has to take a lot of muscles.”

“Can I try?!”- Remi “This is hard.”

“We can help you Remi.” “We’re going to make the school look nice.”

Jewelry Designers in the Making

In this activity, the kids gathered around to talk about the history of jewelry, while making our very own. We shared different stories about our own cultures and the significance of it. One of the kids, Joy, stated “in our culture there’s jewelry made of jade and it’s a bracelet that you keep on until it breaks.” We talked about the different types of beads that are used such as turquoise, glass beads, gemstones, shells, etc. Bracelet making helped them with their eye-hand coordination and they had a great time creating their own art!

Hunting For Hues

The kids started this activity off by making their own color scavenger hunt sheet with colors that they personally picked out. After this, we went outside and the kids had to find an item that matched each and every color on their sheet. This forced them to look beyond from what they usually see or play with outside! One of the kids said, “I didn’t realize there was so much color on the ground!”
